HISTORIC PAINTINGS SOLD.

M. & J. Jones 4-8-14
Portrait of George Washington by
C. W. Peale Brings $4,000.

Early American paintings of historical importance belonging to Dr. George Reuling of Baltimore were sold at the Merwin Galleries last evening. The highest price of the sale was $4,000, paid by C. Ray for a life-size portrait in uniform of George Washington at the battle of Princeton, by Charles Willson Peale. It was sent by Washington to the King of France as a mark of gratitude for the French alliance.

"Portrait of Henry Clay," by John Neagle, considered the most satisfactory full-length likeness of that statesman, went to John Fenning for $390. The same bidder obtained for $530 a bust portrait of Clay, by Rembrandt Peale. It came from the McDonough estate, and was formerly in Peale's Museum, Philadelphia.

C. Ray gave $150 for "The Launching of the Brigantine, by De Soto and Cortez," by Peter F. Rothermel, from the estate of H. R. Latrobe.

Mr. Fenning obtained for $725 John Trumbull's bust portrait of Gen. Washington in uniform. A half-length portrait of Gen. Andrew Jackson by Charles Willson Peale, considered by that artist to be his best portrait, went to Mr. Smith for $725. It was painted in Washington before Jackson started on his Florida campaign. It hung in Peale's Museum in Philadelphia.

C. Ray paid $200 for Gilbert Stuart's portrait of Miss Phillips from the estate of Col. Lewis, great-nephew of Washington. Mr. Smith gave $750 for "The Battle of Bunker Hill," by John Trumbull, who was stationed at Roxbury and witnessed the engagement from that point.

A few pictures from another property were sold after the Reuling ones were disposed of. The top price in this sale was $220 for a "Landscape, with Cottage and Figures," by Meindert Hobbema. The total for the evening was $9,342.

Foreword

So rarely are Colonial and Revolutionary portraits offered at public sale, that the presenting of a collection like that described in the following pages creates an event in the history of American Art. The interest in such a sale cannot be localized, but appeals to the whole country, to the patriotism of all Americans, to the pride which every individual must feel in seeing the life-like presentments of those who were the chief actors in making this country the great nation that it is to-day. Historical Societies, the collectors of early portraits, and the connoisseurs of good paintings, should be particularly interested, as the probability is that many years may elapse before an assemblage of like character and similar importance may pass beneath the gavel of the auctioneer, and the continued absorption by collectors and societies inevitably tends in the direction of increased values.

Long and patient study, diligent search, and great care in securing authentic pedigrees are absolute essentials in the criterion of the values of paintings. Dr. Reuling has expended large sums and spent many years of patient research in this direction, that his gallery should contain only worthy examples, and that no doubt should arise, and every purchaser may be assured that nothing has been left undone that was possible to authenticate every claim made. As in all sales the judgment of the individual purchaser has to be the final test, and it is believed that the paintings now offered will by their merit eloquently speak for themselves.

To mention certain portraits would be invidious when all are of such merit, and many so familiar by the work of the engraver. Peale's famous full-length portrait of Washington has associated with it so much of a personal nature that to most of it will be the chef-d'œuvre of the sale. Shortly after the Battle of Princeton, Washington sent it to the King of France as a token of gratitude for the assistance that the French nation had given us in our hour of trial. On the return of the Marquis de Lafayette to his native country, Louis XVI presented it to him as an appropriate mark of the personal esteem which he felt for the patriot. The combination of such names renders this portrait almost unique in interest.

Another very finely-painted portrait is Andrew Jackson by Charles Willson Peale, full of life and brilliant in coloring, painted shortly before starting on his Florida expedition.

So we might continue giving again a catalogue of the whole sale, but the mention of only two or three like the above is perhaps enough to emphasize the merit and interest of the pictures in the present collection.

The American portraits here presented have recently come to us from the National Museum at Washington City where they have for some time past been on exhibition in that institution.

DARLEY (FELIX O. C.).

Born in Philadelphia in 1822. A prominent figure in the early annals of American Art, he is perhaps best known for his matchless illustrations to the works of Cooper, Irving and Dickens. He died in 1888.

1. PORTRAIT OF JUDGE QUINN.

HEALY (GEORGE PETER ALEXANDER).

Born in Boston, 1813. For many years he worked in Paris, where he obtained a medal of the second class in 1855. His greatest successes were his representations of American statesmen. Among his portraits of distinguished people are those of Grant, Clay, Webster, Calhoun, Tyler, John Quincy Adams, Lincoln and others. He died in Chicago in 1894.

14. PORTRAIT OF HENRY CLAY.

JARVIS (JOHN WESLEY).

Born in England in 1780. At an early age he came to New York, where he gained an enviable reputation as a painter of portraits. He was noted also for his eccentricities and genial humor. Died, 1840.

10. HALF LENGTH PORTRAIT OF WILLIAM CLARK, THE EXPLORER.

NEAGLE (JOHN).

Born in Boston, Massachusetts, November 4th, 1796. Considering his meagre opportunities in early life, the skill he subsequently attained was quite remarkable. He was one of the founders, and for many years president, of the Artist Fund Society, of Philadelphia. As a painter, he was a powerful colorist and a vigorous draughtsman. Unquestionably, he occupied a high position among the American Portrait painters of his day. He died in Philadelphia, September 17, 1865.

4. PORTRAIT OF HENRY CLAY.

NEWTON (GILBERT STUART).

Born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1794. He was a nephew of the American painter, Gilbert Stuart, under whom he pursued his first studies. In 1817 he visited Europe and finally settled in London, where, as a student at the Academy, he made rapid progress. In 1832, Newton was elected a member of the Academy, but a year later developed symptoms of insanity and died in 1835. He was a prominent subject painter, but his greatest successes were attained in his representations of beautiful women.

7. BUST PORTRAIT OF MISS RIEMAN.

PEALE (CHARLES WILLSON).

Born at Chestertown, Maryland, April 16th, 1741. He lived in Boston in 1768-69, where he studied under John Singleton Copley. In 1770 he went to England and entered the studio of Benjamin West. Six years later he established himself in Philadelphia, and later became captain of volunteers and was present at the Battles of Trenton and Germantown. In 1802, he opened "Peale's Museum" in Philadelphia, where he exhibited his collection of Natural Curios, Portraits, etc. He completed in 1772 his first portrait of Washington, who gave him no less than fourteen sittings. Later he painted Washington repeatedly. Among his best known portraits are those of George and Martha Washington, John Hancock, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, John C. Calhoun and Andrew Jackson. He died in Philadelphia, February 22, 1827.

- 2. VIEW OF MOUNT VERNON.
- 15. PORTRAIT OF GENERAL ANDREW JACKSON.
- 18. GENERAL WASHINGTON AT PRINCETON.

PEALE (REMBRANDT).

Born in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, in 1778. Evincing talent very early in life, he painted a portrait of Washington when only seventeen years of age. In 1801, he went to England and studied under Benjamin West. Subsequently he succeeded Trumbull as president of the American Academy and was one of the Virginia members of the Academy of Design. He died in Philadelphia in 1860.

- 8. BUST PORTRAIT OF HENRY CLAY.
- 11. BUST PORTRAIT OF MRS. CHEW OF GEORGETOWN.

ROTHERMEL (PETER F.).

Born in Pennsylvania in 1817. After having engaged in the active practice of his profession in portraiture he went to Europe in 1856 and remained there for four years, during which time he painted his first historical pieces. Possessed of a fine sense of harmony, he was very successful in the conventional portrayal of historical subjects.

12. THE LAUNCHING OF THE BRIGANTINE.

STUART (GILBERT).

Born at Narragansett, Rhode Island, December 3, 1755. He went to England in 1775 where he entered the studio of Benjamin West as a pupil, but soon became an assistant to his master. Among his sitters in Europe were Louis XVI., George III. and George IV., while Prince of Wales. During his career he painted the portraits of six Presidents of the United States—George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and John Quincy Adams. He died in Boston, July 27, 1828.

5. BUST PORTRAIT OF REV. DR. MUHLENBERG.

9. BUST PORTRAIT OF THE EARL OF DUDLEY.

16. PORTRAIT OF MISS PHILIPPS.

TRUMBULL (COLONEL JOHN).

Born at Lebanon, Connecticut, June 6, 1756. Trumbull was one of the most notable American painters of the 18th century. For a time he laid aside the pencil for the sword, serving with distinction during the Revolutionary War, first as aide to Washington, and then as major at the storming of the works of Burgoyne at Saratoga. After leaving the army he became a student under Benjamin West, whose talents, it is now generally admitted, were inferior to those of his pupil. Among his more important paintings are "The Declaration of Independence," "The Surrender of Burgoyne," "The Resignation of Washington," "The Surrender of Cornwallis" and "The Battle of Bunker Hill." He died in New York City, November 10, 1843.

Half length, in military uniform, facing the front, rich warm coloring in the background. Very finely painted and a characteristic portrait of "Old Hickory." Canvas. Height, 29 in.; width, 23½ in.

This was considered by Peale to be his best portrait. It was painted in Washington before Jackson started for his Florida campaign. The artist mentions in a letter to his wife that the General kept him waiting for three days before he would give him his first sitting for the portrait. This canvas hung in the Peale Museum in Philadelphia and was inherited by Miss Sarah Peale, from whose estate it was bought.

A letter of C. W. Peale to his wife regarding this portrait is in the Pennsylvania Historical Society's library. A letter of Miss Mary Peale and a copy of the artist's letter regarding the portrait will be furnished the purchaser.

JOHN TRUMBULL.

17. THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL.

750- In the central group is General Warren, shot through the head and supported on the knees of a soldier who with one hand wards off the bayonet thrust of a grenadier. Col. Small is grasping the bayonet; under his feet is the dead body of General Abercromby. General Putnam is seen ordering a retreat; beyond him a party of American soldiers oppose their last fire to the enemy. Behind the prostrate figures of the two dead commanders are seen Generals Howe and Clinton. A young American with his negro attendant is pictured to the right and beyond him is the ascending British column. In the far distance is seen part of Boston.

The tumult of raging battle is conveyed without confusion. The faces are mostly portraits from life and each expresses distinct personality and sentiment.

The coloring is harmonious, the touch direct and sure, the drawing faultless. The effect, while far from sensational, is extremely dramatic.

Trumbull was stationed at Roxbury and witnessed the engagement from this point. Canvas. Height, 41 in.; width, 61 in.

From estate of John Dexter, Cincinnati.

[See illustration].

CHARLES WILLSON PEALE.

18. GENERAL WASHINGTON AT PRINCETON.

4000-
This life size portrait in full length represents Washington in full uniform, and wearing the blue ribbon of the Commander-in-Chief, voted to him by the Continental Congress. In the background is seen the head of his horse with an attendant. One hand rests lightly on the muzzle of a field piece. A view of Nassau Hall is suggested on one side with a column of surrendered Hessians. Captured English flags are lying in the foreground. Canvas. Height, 79 in.; width, 42 in.

Soon after the battle of Princeton, this painting was sent by General Washington to the King of France as a mark of gratitude for the French Alliance. When Lafayette returned to France the painting was presented to him by Louis XVI. Until after Lafayette's death it hung in his country place, "La Grange," and after the dispersal of his effects, was purchased by M. Marsille, a noted collector of Paris. After M. Marsille's death the painting was bought by M. Duhamel (No. 48 in catalogue of the Marsille sale), who brought it to America the following year. At the sale of the effects of M. Duhamel (catalogue No. 85), the painting was secured by Judge Tissot of New Orleans, from whom the present owner secured it.
